DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1- 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

As per claim 1 line 8 recites “Determining whether at least one attribute of the attribute information is completed to be acquired”. When refereeing to attribute information using the word “complete” does not render the claim as definite and can be mistaken with attribute settings, which is not claimed herewith.

As per claim 1 line 9 recites “...resolution language...”. It is not clear what “resolution language” is and how resolution can employ language as an attribute: While resolution and language are individually defined attributes; however, these terminologies combined together is indefinite.

As per claim 1 line 9 recites “...type...”. It is not clear what is meant by “type” due to the fact that it is a very broad terminology.

Claims 4 and 8 have similar rejections.

Claims 2- 3, 5- 7 and 9- 13 are indefinite because they depend on indefinite antecedent claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1- 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Havekost et al, US Patent 5,768,119, hereinafter, Havekost.

As per claims 1,4,7, and 8 Havekost teaches an acquiring device that acquires, attribute information indicating attributes of said terminal device see for example column 27 lines 19- 27 through work stations 102, 104, 106 and figure 1c, and determines whether at least one of the attribute information (I/O subsystem attribute) is completed to be acquired see for example communication of I/O subsystem attributes transmission in column 7 lines 19- 27, the attribute being at least one of a terminal model, resolution language (see for example column 7 lines 35- 55 for the C ++ programming language which examiner broadly interprets as resolution language), type (see for example column 11 lines 25- 37 for the device type which examiner broadly interprets as type), presence or absence of display function (see for example figure 22 which examiner broadly interprets as display function), color display, font type, type of input device (see for example figure 1 for the keyboard), and presence or absence of audio output function (see for example figure 23 for the alarm states which the examiner broadly interprets as presence (activation of alarm) or absence(deactivation of alarm)); and a selection device that selects, based on the acquired attribute information, operation information that is appropriate for said terminal device from a plurality of types of operation information stored in a predetermined storage area see for example column 7 lines 35- 67 and column 8 lines1- 30(through different controllers and CPUs) and columns 27- 28 (through different controllers and multiplexers); and a providing device that provides the selected operation information to said terminal device see for example column 19 lines 13- 40(through management subsystems) and column 22 lines 46- 65, and a program see for example column 7 lines 58- 65.

As per claims 2,5, and 9 Havekost teaches priority setting information to prompt a user of said terminal device to set the priority for each attribute see for example column 3 lines 45- 50.

As per claims 3,6 and 10 Havekost teaches acquiring only the attribute information that indicates said attribute having a high priority from said terminal device see for example 34 lines 5- 17.

As per claims 11- 13 Havekost teaches said attribute information indicating a plurality of attributes, a priority being set for each attribute, and said selection device selecting said operation information on the basis of said priority see for example column 34 lines 5- 17 wherein alarms is an indexed attribute, and wherein the index selects the Nth highest priority alarm in the consolidation.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 08/27/2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
